Medical and Scientific Communications Network

17 November 2026

Newsletter Archive

32 editions · 14 April–17 November 2026. Select an edition to open its complete newsletter PDF.

17 Nov 2026 — The discipline of concision and the value of soft skills

10 Nov 2026 — Writing an IMPD and exploring metabolic health

03 Nov 2026 — Digital parasites? AI and the future of medical writing

27 Oct 2026 — Caffeine, AI and the human skills behind medical writing

20 Oct 2026 — Medical writing, AI and the value of human judgement

13 Oct 2026 — Science communication in the age of AI and misinformation

06 Oct 2026 — The Power of Words in the Age of AI

29 Sep 2026 — AI, critical thinking and the value of human communication

22 Sep 2026 — Medically Unexplained Symptoms: Four Perspectives

15 Sep 2026 — Who Is Your Reader

08 Sep 2026 — AI Watermarks Closing the Gate

01 Sep 2026 — The End of Publish and Forget

25 Aug 2026 — The Irony of Clarity

18 Aug 2026 — Make Diagnostic Doubt Visible in Healthcare

11 Aug 2026 — Is Your Playlist Secretly Sabotaging Your Focus

04 Aug 2026 — What AI Driven Book Destruction Reveals

28 Jul 2026 — Writing A Deeply Human Act

Newsletter Archive · continued

21 Jul 2026 — Catharsis Cognition and Emotional Regulation

14 Jul 2026 — What Every Good Medical Writer Knows

07 Jul 2026 — Engineering the Creative State

30 Jun 2026 — Medical Education Reimagined

23 Jun 2026 — Medcomms Day and Enduring Symptoms

16 Jun 2026 — Beyond the Abstract Judging Manuscripts in the Age of Data Overload

09 Jun 2026 — The Future of English in the Pharmaceutical Industry

02 Jun 2026 — Play Gamification and the Coming Contest with AI

26 May 2026 — Writers Block in the AI Era

19 May 2026 — From Hand Written Bibliographies to AI Hallucinated Citations

12 May 2026 — The Pen vs The Prompt

05 May 2026 — Innovation in Health Communications

28 Apr 2026 — The MedComms Networking Spring Event 2026

21 Apr 2026 — The Coming Reorganisation of Scientific Knowledge

14 Apr 2026 — Healthy Volunteers in Clinical Trials